

INDIGENOUS CULTURES CONFERENCE UNDERGRADUATE INTERNSHIPS

We are seeking five motivated and enthusiastic Arts & Humanities undergraduates to help organise and participate in a conference on indigenous cultures, languages and histories
12 and 13 September 2016, Humanities Research Institute

A fantastic opportunity to...

- Gain academic experience by playing a key role in an exciting international conference
- Learn more about important global issues concerning indigenous cultures
- Hone teamwork skills and enhance employability
- Gain valuable public engagement, digital media and writing experience by publishing an article for the History Department's prestigious History Matters blog.

Interns will each receive a £100 bursary.

Lunch and refreshments on both days will be provided and interns will be invited to attend the conference dinner at no charge.

All Arts & Humanities undergraduates are eligible, including final-year students.
